"My Sister Eileen" by Joseph A. Fields and Jerome Chodorov, based on the true stories by Ruth McKenney. This hilarious comedy takes place in a one-room basement studio in Greenwich Village about 1940. Two sisters, Ruth and Eileen, end up renting this apartment when they move from Ohio to New York City in hopes of "making it". Ruth aspires to be a writer, and Eileen wants a career on the stage. From the time they move into the less than desirable apartment, they meet a wide variety of characters including Mr. Appopolous, their landlord who is also a painter; Frank Lippencott, a young man who fancies Eileen and works at the local soda fountain; Chic Clark, a sleazy newspaper writer; and Robert Baker, a sincere man who also works for a newspaper and is a love interest of both sisters. The antics of these characters plus more will ensure an evening of spontaneous fun!
